Protest Against Vivisection

Although 12 persons attended a meeting held last night to inaugurate an Adelaide branch of the British Union for the Abolition of Vivisection, and the majority of speakers were favorably inclined towards the proposal, the branch was not actually formed, as neither chairman nor committee was appointed, and no vote taken. Subscriptions were accepted, however.

Criticism of vivisection was made by Miss V. A. Mitton, the acting secretary, who said that it was difficult to enumerate the appalling cruelties inflicted on animals in the course of medical research. Miss Mitton described vivisection as unscientific, useless and misleading.

The Rev. C. J. Perry, who presided, said that no such operations were performed on animals at the Adelaide University or the Adelaide Hospital without anaesthetics having first been administered. A vivisectionist should in his view, be a vegetarian and he was not prepared to be a vegetarian. There was no proof of any atrocities having been committed in Adelaide.

The meeting closed after subscriptions had been accepted.

Oxford Barriers Lowered To Women

LONDON, June 4.

The congregation of the Oxford University abolished almost the last discrimination against female students when it passed a statute providing that all degrees shall be equally available to men and women, including bachelorships and doctorates of divinity.

The Corinthian Club

By E. HAROLD DAVIES

A LITTLE more than a year ago the Adelaide Music Salon was formed for the purpose of promoting a wider interest in the art, as well as to foster its fuller appreciation. Those of us whose lives are devoted to that end gladly welcomed the occasion. There was great need for such a movement, and the present large membership of the salon promises well for a future of considerable influence and active support.

But the good work is extending; for Mr. John Dempster has now happily conceived the idea of a Corinthian Club to achieve a similar purpose among the more youthful spirits of our community. Its object, therefore, is to reinforce the aims of the salon, possibly in a less conventional way, meeting the younger set on their own ground and wisely seeking to understand the new psychology which we older folk sometimes misinterpret and often distrust. This is all to the good; and the mere fact of an awaking enthusiasm for things of the mind and the spirit is distinctly encouraging.
