Indonesian Graduate Scheme

Since 1951 a number of Australian graduates have gone to Indonesia to assist the development of a country sadly lacking in trained people.

Under the Indonesian Graduate Employment Scheme, as it is called, these Australians work at the same rates of pay and hire, with Indonesians working in the same field. They have done much to foster international goodwill between Australia and Indonesia. Secretary of the N.U.A.U.S. Committee of Graduate Employment in Indonesia, Jim Webb, has recently visited Indonesia to report on the scheme at first hand. A young Political Science graduate from Melbourne, he is to speaking on the Graduate Employment Scheme next Friday, July 22, at 1.20, in the Lady Symon Hall. On his return from Indonesia, he said: "Considerable opportunities exist for the expansion of the graduate scheme in the next few months. My conversations with officials throughout Java and Sumatra indicated that many more Australian volunteer graduates will be welcomed to Indonesia, if they are prepared to come in the same spirit as the initial groups."

EDITORIAL

Tomorrow is one of the most important days in the University calendar. You will be given the opportunity to elect Men's and Women's General Representatives to the S.R.C.

As a student it is not only your right, but your duty that you should repay those with sufficient spirit and will to work to nominate by recording a vote.

This Council will represent your views in University affairs, so if you are not sufficiently interested to record a vote, it will ill behoove you to criticise the Council elected.

We students are supposedly the more responsible section of the community, and we should not allow the same apathy to creep into our elections as crept into the recent Metropolitan Council elections. Such apathy reflects not only a lack of interest, but the abuse of a privilege, the withdrawal of which would bring a storm of indignant protest.

It is not compulsory in our University to vote, but it has been given serious consideration elsewhere and, indeed, could provide the answer to the many who are too disinterested to exercise this right.

The candidates themselves, by their very nominating, have shown an interest in student affairs and a desire to work to make conditions better for you, it is surely not too much for you to accord them the courtesy of voting.

The S.R.C. is your protection, and the Men's and Women's General Representatives on it are there to represent, not their particular Faculties, but the entire student body.

It is up to you to vote for them!

STUDENTS — "LOUTS, LARRIKINS"

An attack on Australian University students and the students of Sydney University in particular was made by a prominent member of the press, Mr. E. Baume, in a broadcast on Saturday night.

It was claimed that Australian University students were showing through their "puerile" processions and rags that they considered themselves apart from society and above the law, and that they were overstepping themselves and must be brought up with a "round turn."

The programme, which was presumably recorded, featured a heated argument between three representatives of the Sydney University and a well-known correspondent.

The debate centred mainly round the recent "Traffic Lights" demonstration in Sydney.

The rioters were roundly criticised and described as "louts" and "ruffians." It was claimed that in demonstrating after 30 years negotiations, the students were "overstepping themselves," and were "encouraging people to deal with them in pitched street battles."

The three representatives who were from the Labor and Liberal Party groups and the S.C.M. were told that the public "don't want stormtroopers" and "vulgar larrikins." It was also stated that there were "Fascist stormtroopers" and "Long-haired Reds" in the University of Sydney.

When they criticised false reporting a small section of the press and radio their criticism was misconstrued into a "disgusting attack on the honesty of the press." A heated argument followed in which the students vainly tried to explain that they appreciated the fairness of the press as a whole, but did not agree with a certain section of it.

In defence of the students, it was pointed out that they had aided rescuers in the recent flood disaster, and had volunteered for scientific tests at danger to themselves.

AMBASSADORS FROM MALAYA HERE

The party of Malaysians who are touring Australian Universities during their long vacation arrived in Adelaide on Thursday.

They were welcomed by the S.R.C. and their hosts in Adelaide at buffet tea in the George Murray Hall.

They then adjourned to a debate in the Mawson lecture theatre.

On Friday morning they were taken on a conducted tour of the University and were most interested in the engineering department.

Their engagements on Friday included an inspection of Holden Motors and of "The News," as well as an official call on the Lord Mayor and a reception at night.

A trip to Victor Harbour was enjoyed on Saturday and on Sunday a tour of the Barossa Valley was arranged.

Mr. Peter De Maya, one of the students with the party mentioned to an astonished audience that the annual University Ball in Singapore netted £2,000 for general student funds. He also said that a public appeal for funds to start a Chinese University had returned £2,500,000 in three weeks.

He was astonished that he had any difficulty in raising such a sum as £200,000.

He claimed that the main source of these fabulous donations was graduates, who had no hesitation in donating large sums.

The Malaysians all said they enjoyed their stay in Adelaide, and the Tour organisers, Sam Abrahams and Brenton Mowbray were accorded special thanks.
