

22nd November, 1954.

My dear Frank,

Make it Thursday, November 25th, for which I will at once book a guest room, <sup>could you</sup> ~~and~~ phone up someone here so that we can know when you are coming and, with luck, meet you at the station?

I have heard again from G. W. Thomson of the Ethyl Corporation, proposing the release of their table to us for possible publication in a later edition of Statistical Tables. His table seems to cover no more ground than Saldatme's, and I think the change from angles to ratios is of rather trifling importance, but evidently his group must have thought that it was worth doing. In any case it is interesting evidence that the test is being used, which I was not so sure of before, so for my part I should favour including this small amount of material in addition to what we have on the test. However, I should like a firm decision on this before writing to thank him for his offer.

Sincerely yours,

Enc. (2. When you file Thomson)
