Dear Mrs Tysser,

Thanks for your note. I had scarcely hoped that you would be attracted to apply for this post, which is, I am afraid, rather poorly paid, as Stevens will have told you.

What I think I need is a personal assistant for rather heavy computational work, which I am liable to want to start at short notice, each job of which will require <sup>a</sup> different procedure<sup>s</sup>. This means that it is very far from being routine work such as I could easily get an assistant for, but rather work of some complexity, requiring ultimately quite a repertoire of computational devices.

I am really very glad you are inclined to apply.

Yours sincerely,
