Dear Fisher

I have been much interested in reading enclosed, which I return in case you need it. I shall no doubt see it again in print. If the research studentships have the effects you hope for, my ghost will be seen wandering about your Lab. at night with a broad smile on its face. The studentships at Cambridge, to which my family name has been attached, seem to me to have had rather disappointing results. If so, it might be worth enquiring why. Perhaps I am wrong. Penrose was, I think, one of them, and though he seems to me a triple 'academee', he may be worth while. As to the word 'political', the man in the train will associate it with a desire to punch the head of anyone belonging to an opposing political party. You use 'political' correctly; but I think 'legislative' would bring home your meaning better, to the said individual in the train.

Mac Bride wanted us to be 'political' in the narrow sense.
I had only quite recently grasped the probable future importance of linkage, which certainly may be very great. I do not gather if your Lab. is to be the home of the new serological show based on American money. Anyhow it is an admirable move. No anon - Yours sincerely
Lemuel Dawson
