

March 11. 27.

CRIPPS'S CORNER,

FOREST ROW,

SUSSEX.

My dear Fisher.

You asked me if I thought your plan about the reviewing of the genetic literature would work well, and I said 'yes'. I believe I added - and if I did not I want now to add - that I hoped that you would get ^{my} H's suggestions as to reviews of particular bits of work, and that you would agree to them unless you think them objectionable. You propose not to work through the office in certain respects. This may be all right, but the less done the better. Mrs H. is,

I think, rather over tired and in a difficult frame of mind. I fear that some day there may be difficulties existing in her retirement, but I am anxious to put it off as long as possible. She has valuable initiative, and she is incomparably better than the late Mrs Green!

I find that a talk with her alone is the best safety valve.
This I have tried to avoid as much as I possibly could since the new rules, and I can only hope that you and Cutler will file my place in this respect as far as possible. I know without such talks I should often have been unjust to her with regard to complaints made to me. Please don't trouble to answer. I am going to pay some visits, & should like to cast ^{some} ~~some~~ to the winds for a bit.

If you do go to the Office before Hensh's lecture, would you consider if anything could be done to get him an audience? Do we send to Genetic Soc.? Again no answer.

Yours sincerely
Leonard Darwin
