CRIPPS'S CORNER,

FOREST ROW,

SUSSEX.

My dear Fisher,

I am very glad to hear you are on the mend. I am sorry you were not able to come to the dinner which was very successful.

I know no more about Heron except what I told you. Who wrote the article which appears Pearson or Heron or both I do not know; but I am practically certain it was not you. I am't over kind things but I will say them out right.

About Bramble's meeting if you feel really strongly that I had better be in the chair I will gladly do so. I think I suggested to Mr. Hodgson that you should take the chair as I thought probably you would like to do so. My doctors have been bothering me about cutting off some of my London work, and I had proposed to sacrifice Bramble on the altar of health. I can easily make some other sacrifice in its place. Kindly settle exactly as you like. The date suits me as well as any other.
Yours sincerely L. Darwin Feb 2. 2.

P.S. I suppose my criticism amounts to saying that Cobb did not take 'chance' into account sufficiently or at all

I have only recently got over that sick attack I had, and shall have to be careful in London for a bit now to tie myself

Yours
D
