

November 7th [1924] JAB

CRIPPS'S CORNER,
FOREST ROW,
SUSSEX.

My dear Fisher,

Prof. MacBride is very angry about the review and has written an enormously long letter which I think we must publish. I wish we could have got a more purely neutral review;
because the question of acquired characters will be settled outside our sphere, whilst any squabble amongst ourselves does persons damage to Hygiene.

I rather hope that Mac Brides letter will not raise a controversy in our columns for this reason.

I have not seen any reason to change my mind yet about the theoretical point, but I have a suspicion I again made a mistake such as putting increase when I meant decrease.
This letter requires no answer.

Yours sincerely
L. Darwin
