My dear Fisher,

I have been having a cold in my head, which makes me feel rather muddled, and therefore I should feel it a comfort if some kind friend would look at certain corrections which I am proposing to make in the last part of my address. I send you a typewritten paragraph, which I propose to insert for that struck out on page 5 and marked 'X' in the margin. There is also a correction on page 8, about which I feel a little doubtful. I do not much like the word 'poverty' which I have introduced, but if it is left out it might seem to imply that any financial pressure, even amongst the rich, ought to be held as an excuse for birth limitation. I have been having some talks with Mr. Fleischi, who, I think, dislikes all reference to finance as far as I can make out.

Any help gratefully received, especially if I may accept or reject your advice as I see fit!

Please return enclosures.

Yours sincerely,

L. DARWIN.
