17th April, 1920.

My dear Fisher,

I send you a proof of a paper by Stevenson which may interest you. His conclusions indicate that there is no difference in natural infertility between the various classes. This, I think, can be seen best by extrapolating downwards the table given on page 8. It, at all events, looks as if there was no great difference in infertility.

The meeting will take place on Tuesday, but I doubt if the discussion will be very interesting, as it is rather too technical a subject. Of course, if you chance to be in London I shall be very glad to see you there.

Yours sincerely,

L. DARWIN.
