

2nd April, 1919.

My dear Fisher,

I think MacBride sent your paper back to you. I was in a hurry when I sent it him and had not found time to read it and I had intended that he should send it back to me, hence I have not read it which I am sorry for. I should be glad to read it, if you care to send it me once again.

My paper on "Postulates" is now ready. What I shall do with it, goodness only knows.

I shall be interested to hear your plans when they are settled.

Yours sincerely,

L. Darwin
