

3rd December, 1918.

My dear Fisher,

Many thanks for all the trouble you are taking about my paper. I have received your letter returning your former letter and the letter from ^{quite} you, but I have not yet got back the proof with my additional notes, nor have you answered my definite question, whether you think I have sufficiently safe-guarded the position. I put this plainly to you, because I want to make sure that a letter has not gone astray as I think is possible.

Yours sincerely,

L. Dawson
