

15th February, 1951.

My dear Henry,

I am writing in the hope of making an opportunity to see you some time before you become immersed in the ecological activities of the summer. What I have in mind is either the Royal Society Dining Club which is now meeting more frequently than before and, I believe, has a dinner in view for every meeting of the Society this session.

Or, of course, it is always the greatest pleasure to me when you can find time to spend a night or two as my guest in College.

P.T.O.

Let me know if any of these seem promising.

Yours sincerely,
