Dear Dr Fortuyn,

The other day I wrote to Edgar Anderson at St Louis, telling him that I understood you were going to take up a post in that city, and letting him know of your genetical interests. It has occurred to me since that, in view of the doubt in which you must still be as to when you can travel, it would have been better if I had sent this letter of introduction to you. However, what I am writing will, I hope, fulfil this purpose. I am sure Dr Anderson will be anxious to make your acquaintance as soon as you can let him know that you have arrived, or are about to arrive in his city.

Yours sincerely,
