

19 April 1943

My dear Taylor,

Thanks for your note which percolated down to Somerset, where I was hunting primroses. I also have not seen any advertisement, though I was glad to have your news that things are moving.

By the way, did you ever get into touch with Dr P. Turnbull, the Medical Superintendent of the Tooting Bec Hospital, or any of his assistants? I forget exactly how we left it, but perhaps you were waiting for me to give you his name and address, before your writing get him to to him in order to/arrange for a large number of patients to be available for blood-grouping, if you are able to visit the hospital. If they could mobilise even a couple of hundred, it would seem well worth while to make the trip.

Yours sincerely,
